slights. The Shias have apparently decided to oust the Palestinians, by force if necessary, and have discussed some form of military cooperation with Christian leaders Franjiyah and Shamun.// //The ambassador also said that there is widespread disillusionment among both officers and enlisted men in the Lebanese Arab Army--the breakaway Muslim faction previously allied with the leftists -- who have come to feel they have been fighting for no useful cause, and have begun to desert in growing numbers.// the reorientation of the Lebanese Arab Army may reflect the disorganization and low morale of the leftist and Palestinian forces--and the friction between them--as the war drags on and the initiative seems to remain in Christian and Syrian hands. Sarkis has said that one of his first priorities will be the formation of an internal security force drawn from both Muslim and Christian ranks. A reorganized Lebanese Arab Army-especially one willing to cooperate with the Syrian-sponsored "Vanguards of the Lebanese Army"--might, in time, provide the nucleus of such a force. More than 30 people were reportedly killed by indiscriminate shelling in west Beirut yesterday, and snipers were active elsewhere in the city. Artillery fire continued in several of the city's suburbs, including Shiyah and Ayn Rummanah. Although activity in the mountains east of Beirut was lower than usual, there was sporadic shelling there. Moscow has for the first time made a gesture of support for Syria's position in Lebanon. Pravda yesterday carried a news report on President Asad's speech to his troops near the Israeli border. It included Asad's justification for the presence of Syrian troops in Lebanon as well as his specific criticism of the PLO role in Lebanon.

25X1 Such support will not please the PLO, which had already volced misgivings about a September 8 Pravda "Observer" article that was critical of "leftist elements" of the Palestinian movement. Moscow seems to be making an effort to acknowledge 25X1 the realities of the Lebanese situation. A Soviet official in Cairo recently said the Soviets believed it was necessary for the Syrians to remain in Lebanon to quarantee any settlement. 25X1 ANGOLA-USSR: Neto to Visit Moscow 25X1 Angolan President Neto will pay an official visit to the USSR early next month, according to an announcement from Moscow. The visit will be in response to a Soviet invitation issued last May, when Angolan Prime Minister Nascimento was in Moscow seeking additional Soviet assistance. The USSR, along with Cuba, remains Angola's principal source of aid. 25X1 25X1 From the Soviet standpoint, Neto's visit probably could not be better timed. It presents Soviet leaders with an opportunity to press their attack against the Rhodesian settlement plan announced last Friday by Rhodesian Prime Minister Smith. 25X1 Neto will probably be cautious, however, about assoclating himself with any Soviet criticism that could put him out of step with other front-line African presidents because he values his newly acquired status as a member of their group. 25X1 The visit could be offset somewhat by Angola's expected resumption of diplomatic ties with Portugal at about

25X1	the same time. The Angolan and Portuguese foreign ministers are to meet in Cape Verde around October 1 to work out final arrangements. Neto is anxious to resume the ties to balance his foreign relations and broaden his sources of assistance.
20/(1	POLAND: Sentences Suspended
25X1	The Polish Supreme Court yesterday suspended the sentences of seven workers imprisoned for disrupting international railroad traffic during the strike on June 25 protesting announced price increases.
25X1	In nullifying the three-to-five-year sentences, the court said "a sense of social justice has been satisfied." The suspension, which is unprecedented, was almost certainly ordered by the top party hierarchy.
25X1	This is only the latest effort by the insecure Gierek leadership to appease the Polish public and the Catholic Church. Since the June riots, the regime has twice withdrawn proposals for price increases out of fear of public reaction. In addition, the leaders have become increasingly forthright in describing Poland's economic plight and in informing the public about economic decisions.
25X1	In addition to placating the Polish people, the regime was responding to pleas from the Polish episcopate and to demands of West European communist parties that the strikers be treated leniently.

5X1	Foreign Minister Kosaka will confirm Japan's commitment to return the aircraft to the Soviets during his meeting with Foreign Minister Gromyko at the UN today. Negotiations over the details of the transfer will be held in Tokyo.
5X1	Kosaka reportedly will avoid giving Gromyko a firm timetable for the return of the aircraft. Japanese defense officials calculate that it will take about two weeks to prepare the MIG for shipment, and, if the negotiations proceed rapidly, even the Japanese investigation of the aircraft will be curtailed.	25

SPAIN: Political Activity

The likelihood that parliamentary elections will be held in Spain by June has led to increased political activity on all sides.

Approved For Release 2007/03/06 : CIA-RDP79T00975A029300010046-6

25X1	The government's proposed reforms have also affected the militant Basque Fatherland and Liberty terrorist organization. Representatives of the group told journalists in southwest France last week that they are abandoning the "struggle against the Franco regime," although they will "remain armed."
25X1	The Basque militants will apparently create a "revolutionary and nationalist" political party. If the organization's leaders can bring the rank and file along, the group's new orientation should help halt Basque terrorist acts and aid the government's efforts to persuade Basques to participate in the reform process.

	UK: Pound at Record Low
25X1	//The British pound closed yesterday in London at $1.68 and a cent lower in New York, a record low against the dollar. It fell nearly three cents from its close on Friday and has fallen over 5 percent since the Bank of England stopped intervening in support of sterling on September 9.//
25X1	//The latest decline came when even relatively small sales met little buying interest. A general uncertainty and lack of confidence in the British economy and current government policy have been worsened recently by a fear that the fringe benefits won by the British Seamen's Union would lead to demands by other unions for similar treatment. The Bank of England's apparent reluctance to continue to support the pound has compounded the problem.//
25X1	//The Bank stopped intervention in an attempt to preserve its remaining foreign exchange reserves and to avoid further drawing on its $5.3-billion standby credit. Support operations through the first eight months of this year have cost the Bank an estimated $5.5 billion. The Bank's current $1-billion drawings against the standby credit become due in early december.	25X1
	USSR: Defense Spending Estimate

if such officers interpret his remarks as an indication that the government will give less attention to antiguerrilla opera-

25X1 Martinez de Hoz was on somewhat firmer ground with his assessment of the economy. Inflation is down dramatically from the runaway levels it reached early this year, and considerable foreign financial assistance has been forthcoming. The economy minister asserted that the worst part of the recession is over, but warned Argentines not to be lulled into thinking they can abandon austerity measures. 25X1 //The junta clearly still backs the minister's orthodox economic policies, but there is serious criticism, from both the public and the military. Recent, widespread work stoppages are an obvious sign that labor is tiring of wage limits in the face of continued high prices. Pressure within the military is reportedly mounting for the government to allow greater wage hikes before labor is irretrievably alienated.//
